

THE GERMAN ENERGY LANDSCAPE AFTER THE MAJOR DEAL ANNOUNCED BY E.ON AND RWE – TEAM CONSULT STUDY ANSWERS URGENT QUESTIONS

Two powerhouses of the German energy landscape are repositioning themselves. RWE and E.ON are entering into a complex deal involving a redistribution of business units and assets between the two, aiming to strengthen the companies through more focused business models. In the process, Innogy will to a large extent be incorporated by E.ON.

Both E.ON and RWE only recently re-invented themselves by splitting of Uniper and Innogy, respectively. The new major deal now raises several questions:

- What does the deal mean for the German Energy Landscape?
- What are the drivers and the rationale behind the deal?
- Which immediate market impact will there be and what long-term consequences are to be expected both for the involved parties and for other market participants?

Team Consult answers these questions and evaluates the implications of the deal within the scope of a market study intended for energy industry executives. A focus of the study is the motivation of the involved parties and the logic behind the deal. Secondly, the study investigates the consequences, the opportunities and risks resulting for different parties, i.e. what the deal means for E.ON and RWE as well as for the regulator, for competitors, and for other market participants.

If you are among those who could be affected by the consequences of the deal, e.g. as a player in the German energy industry or as an investor, the results and findings in our study may be useful to you. The study can be purchased from Team Consult.
